ATLANTA: Fast-casual sushi arrived at Krog Street Market this past weekend. Makimono, a new dining spot lead by Executive Chef Jey Oh, opened for lunch and dinner featuring sushi rolls, bowls and a full-service bar.

“We had a great run with Craft Izakaya and after two years in the market it was time to rethink the way we serve our customers,” said Chef Jey. “Our goal with opening Makimono was to provide KSM with another fast-casual dining option featuring quality sushi and bowls at affordable prices, day and night.”

Makimono has pared down their menu to showcase a carefully curated list of items including sushi rolls like the Dragon (shrimp tempura, eel, crab salad, avocado, cucumber, fish roe, and eel sauce) and Veggie (pickled daikon, pickled carrot, sweet egg, marinated tofu skin, avocado, and cucumber). Guests looking for a bit more roll control will also have the opportunity to indulge in their culinary creativity by selecting items from the create-your-own-roll menu.

“We appreciate the thoughtful transformation taking place at Makimono. Flipping the sushi bar into the main hall allows for greater visibility as well as the opportunity for grab and go sushi that wasn’t as easily accessible before,” said David Cochran, President of Paces Properties. “It’s a pleasure to continue working with the team behind Craft Izakaya as they reinvent their space to remain a part of the vibrant Krog Street Market community.”

Just beyond the sushi and cocktail bar which features beer, wine, and cocktails, Krog Street Market guests are able to enjoy the added bonus of a 75-inch TV to show sports on the weekends. Once the main restaurant dining area for Craft Izakaya, their dining space will be turned into additional communal market seating where guests can dine no matter what food stall they patronized. Makimono is now open for lunch and dinner daily.
