ATLANTA: The Atlanta Ramadan Food Festival returns to metro Atlanta for its second installment with a one-of-a-kind overnight, night market-style celebration of food, culture, and community. Designed as a vibrant late-night destination, the festival features halal cuisine, cultural experiences, a diverse artisan market, and a dedicated kids' area with family-friendly activities. Guests can explore indoor and outdoor spaces, enjoy complimentary water throughout the evening, and engage with community partner activations and charitable awareness opportunities that reflect the spirit of the season. Hosted by the Atlanta Muslim Festival Collective (AMFC), the organization behind the highly successful Summer and Fall Halal Festivals, the event is the group's third signature food festival.

"After the incredible response we've received to this and our Halal Summer and Fall Festivals in 2025, we're excited to continue creating events that bring people together in meaningful ways," said Hasnain Lakhani, co-founder of the Atlanta Muslim Festival Collective and Atlanta entrepreneur. "The Atlanta Ramadan Food Festival is about so much more than great food. We're celebrating community during one of the most meaningful times of the year. Ramadan is a season centered on reflection, generosity, and connection, and this festival creates a space where Muslims and non-Muslims alike can gather, learn, and share those values. Whether you're familiar with Ramadan traditions or experiencing them for the first time, everyone is welcome at the table."

More than 60 curated food vendors from across metro Atlanta and the Southeast will transform the Norcross venue into a bustling late-night marketplace filled with global flavors, from sizzling kabobs and savory rice dishes to indulgent desserts and specialty beverages from a dynamic mix of local dessert makers, international street food concepts, and established halal restaurants. Featured vendors include Atlanta-founded brands like PONKO Chicken and Eggroll Boyz, both of which feature entire menus of certified-halal eats, and diverse neighborhood favorites, including Simons Chinese for authentic Chinese and Thai Food, Island Seafood for fresh seafood dishes, Shaza Kitchen for delicious Indian cuisine, and Char Kingz for classic halal street foods, to name a few. Vegetarian, vegan, and select gluten-free options will be available. All menu items will be prepared in accordance with halal values – made with care, integrity, and respect for halal dietary guidelines. Like kosher or plant-based cuisine, halal food is something anyone can enjoy, and many Atlantans are already familiar with halal offerings throughout the city's diverse dining scene.

The Atlanta Ramadan Food Festival celebrates the cherished tradition of gathering for iftar and suhoor – the meals that break and begin the daily fast during the holy month of Ramadan. While rooted in Muslim culture, the festival is intentionally designed to be open and welcoming to everyone. In keeping with the reflective nature of Ramadan, the festival will not feature loud music or amplified entertainment, instead focusing on meaningful cultural engagement. Guests of all faiths and backgrounds are encouraged to attend, learn, and experience an evening centered on food, connection, and community.

The Atlanta Ramadan Food Festival is proudly supported by community partners including Zakat Foundation of America, Islamic Relief USA, and Peak Capital Partner, organizations committed to humanitarian relief, charitable engagement, and strengthening local communities.

TICKETS ARE ON SALE NOW: Tickets are $12 (plus a processing fee) and can be purchased here or at the festival gates if the event does not sell out online. Guests are encouraged to purchase tickets in advance. Children ages 7 and under receive free entry.

PARKING: On-site parking will be available, with overflow parking coordinated nearby. Event signage and traffic direction will be in place to ensure smooth entry and exit for guests.

WEATHER POLICY: The festival is rain or shine. The event utilizes both indoor and outdoor space and can comfortably operate in normal rain conditions. In the event of severe weather, including thunderstorms or lightning, activities will be moved indoors to prioritize guest safety.
