ATLANTA: Panda Fest Atlanta is only a few short weeks away, and the festival is unveiling its dynamic lineup of local, regional, and national vendors, offering delicious foods, refreshing drinks, and an exciting selection of artisanal goods. This April 3-5, Atlantic Station's Pinnacle Lot will once again be home to a celebration of AAPI culture, featuring over 80 food vendors, 20+ artisan merchants, and entertaining cultural performers. Packed with flavor and panda-themed fun, the event promises delights to suit every taste.

"Food is at the heart of the Panda Fest experience, and when we curate the vendor lineup for the festival, we're thinking about what tastes good, but more importantly, what truly represents AAPI cultures and tells the stories behind them," said BiuBiu Xu, Founder of Panda Fest. "Each of our vendors helps shape the experience of Panda Fest, and together they create an environment where people can connect through shared meals, meaningful conversations, and a deeper understanding of culture."

Panda Fest fans can look forward to a mix of new and returning vendors from previous festivals, who will prepare and serve over 200 incredible dishes from various cuisines across Asia and the Pacific Islands. From traditional fare like Chinese noodles, Japanese takoyaki, and Vietnamese banh mi to bites created through cultural fusion, like beef bulgogi fries and kimchi fried rice, Panda Fest offers attendees the unique opportunity to try a variety of classic dishes and unique Asian-inspired bites, all at one event.

ABOUT PANDA FEST: Launched in 2024, Panda Fest is one of the largest outdoor Asian food and culture festivals in the United States. In its first year alone, the festival produced 13 events across 11 cities, welcoming over 500,000 attendees, with attendance continuing to grow. Featuring experiential activities, tastings, market fairs, and live performances, Panda Fest brings communities together to celebrate the richness of Asian American and Pacific Islander cultures. Pandas serve as a playful central theme, appearing throughout the event in inflatables, games, activities, merchandise, and food offerings. Originally created as a one-day event called Panda Day by founder BiuBiu Xu, Panda Fest has since expanded into a multi-day, multi-city experience with events held in Atlanta, Boston, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Dallas, Seattle, Austin, the Twin Cities, Connecticut, Charlotte, Nashville, and Orlando.
